Submission	The V-EMPOWER Coaching Project is aimed at empowering students through Executive Coaching. In this project 100 Global ICF (International Coaching Federation) credentialed coaches have collaborated with Shoolini University to empower 600 students.  This included assisting students to maintain the motivation needed to attain their goals. The partnership with ICF Foundation's Ignite initiative enables coaching to be provided free of charge to students; and this is the first such initiative at scale on a pro-bono basis.  Evidence of success as collated based on a self-assessment form, listed a 62% rise in ten core domains like, awareness of strengths, confidence in attaining goals, overcoming fear of failure, satisfaction with choice of major, awareness of values and connection to life purpose. This project could herald the beginning of the use of coaching to empower students to become individuals with better cognitive decision-making.
