

THE Awards 2019 – Most Innovative Teacher of the Year

Institution/Nominee	Andrew O'Hagan, Nottingham Trent University
Title	Most Innovative Teacher 2019
Key personnel	Andrew O'Hagan, senior lecturer, Nottingham Trent University
Submission	As a former detective sergeant with 31 years' experience in serious and organised crime, including undercover and covert policing operations in the UK and Europe, Andy O'Hagan doesn't just teach forensic science from a textbook. Alongside lecturing, he is an international drug trafficking expert providing evidence for the courts. His expertise has attracted industry-leading organisations such as LEVA and BlackBag into partnerships with the University, giving his students knowledge that other universities do not have access to. From live fire displays to working with sniffer dogs, and placement opportunities made possible through his extensive network of contacts, Andy is focused on giving his students an experience that is as exciting as it is rewarding, personal, and educational. With a remarkable six NTU Students' Union awards for Teacher of the Year within the school of Science and Technology, and the Vice Chancellors Award for Teaching, he has the accolades to prove it.
