Property Week's new strategy forum for property finance and investment in the UK

Over the next ten years the speed at which the UK property industry will transform is set to increase dramatically. Driven by political, social and macro-economic forces that are without precedent, the impacts are tough to predict.

Brought to you by Property Week, the UK's leading property industry title, the inaugural Property Finance & Investment Future Forum will examine the implications of change for every aspect of the industry's financial future and the opportunities ahead.

JOINING THE DOTS TO HELP YOU NAVIGATE THE FUTURE

Property Week, the leading news platform for commercial and residential property markets, is bringing together an illustrious group of strategists and specialists to discuss where the property finance & investment market might be in 2030. Will you join us?

We'll be reaching out to the most senior finance and investment specialists in UK commercial and residential property, from institutional investors to traditional and new lenders, from property developers to real estate management firms. And, of course, the policy makers and regulators that influence the market environment.

TOPICS AND FORMAT

Drawing on some of the best minds in the property industry and beyond, we'll engage our audience with interactive sessions and collaborative exchanges.

Some of the topics we'll explore:

- How is the real estate market recovering from Covid-19?
- De-stressing funds: refinancing tertiary real estate
- Regulating open ended funds
- What new opportunities lie ahead for real estate investment?
- More than just an island: Real estate investment post-Brexit
- Stamping our Greenwashing

A series of concurrently run hosted roundtables will enhance your networking opportunities.

Roundtable topics will include: Tax implications, sustainable design and retrofitting, onshore v offshore.
